# After reading a passage, write a one-sentence summary of the passage.

The saying “the camera never lies.” has been with us almost since the beginning of photography - yet we all now know that it can, and does lie, and very convincingly. Yet most of us still seem to trust the truth of a photograph's image - especially in our newspapers or on TV news reports - even though we may question its message. When thinking of photographs as an accurate reflection of unaltered reality. We're convinced of this when we take un-posed snaps on our family holiday of colleagues the worse for wear at the office party. It is this property of photography that makes it hard to question the evidence before our eyes.

Our holiday snaps, though, like photographs showing life ten, fifty, a hundred years ago, tend only to bring about at most a feeling of nostalgia - not always a negative emotion. Many people keep albums to relive the better moments of their lives - and their impact is reduced by the fact that what they show is over, part of history. News photos, on the other hand, in presenting moments of an event that is probably still going on somewhere, must provoke a more vivid, emotional response.

Sample Answer -

While it is generally believed that photographs are convincing and accurately reflect the truth, photographic images not only remind people of what was happening in the past but vividly present what is going on right now as well.
